

The Power Suit - Do You Have One?

Herbert Harold once said that, “clothes don’t make the man but clothes have got many men good jobs.” Even though the Power Suit has been around for quite some time now, this fashion element only got its way into the fashion arena recently in the 1980s.

During the greed decade, big business reigned supreme. It is also the same time that saw fashion take its cue from the economy of excesses and with shoulder pads getting much bigger every season till they were able to scale the heights towards the end of the 1980s.

In addition to the broad and much padded shoulders, the power suit for men at the time had sharp lines which had some degree of rigidity. Of course the point here was not in any way intended to make the wearer look ridiculous but rather it was a fashion sense in its right. Those who used to wear such suits argued that such suits were intended to make the wearer look larger than life. Of course the idea behind the whole thing was that an increase in physical size would result in an increased in perceived power and dominance.

Nowadays, donning a custom made power suit from the 1980s style is more likely to turn you into the laughing stock in town as opposed to being the high roller. However, we all need to appreciate the fact that the nation of the suit still remains to be of great essence. Some people might want to see it as more of an ensemble which allows you²³ to effectively protect leadership and success. Thankfully, in the modern day, these suits are much more wearable and flattering as opposed to their predecessor.

If you don't have the modern day power suit for men, perhaps this is the right time that you should get one. Try to think of it as being more of a cornerstone of your wardrobe. This should definitely be the most expensive suit that you will ever afford and more so, it comes with a strong emphasis on impeccable tailoring and style. The blazer typically comes with two or three buttons just to make sure everyone can choose the one that suits them the best. You can then wear your suit with a dress shirt, silk tie and some black polished leather shoes. If you love fashion and have a sense for it, this is definitely the suit that you should settle for.

The Custom Made Power Suit

If you truly want to dress to impress, you have to adorn a suit that really makes you confident and much more in control of your life. One thing that is for sure is that shopping for such a suit can prove to be overwhelming and a pretty confidence-depleting activity. This is especially the case if you are not used to wearing suits. With the many options that are currently available in the market, it can be very easy for you to get lost but such suits in this case are much easier to spot. Power suits are the best option that you should settle for in the modern day.
